

POLITICIANS IN A BIG POW-WOW

Followers Of All The Late Senatorial Candidates Are Gathering In Milwaukee.

"NO CONVENTION RESOLUTIONS"

With Regard To The Senatorial Contest Is Said To Be The New Battle-Cry Of Stephenson

Men.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 8.—Politics of big import were discussed by the leaders of the republican ranks today. Senator Isaac Stephenson arrived in the city on an early morning train and he lost no time in getting into consultation with his closest friends. E. A. Edmonds of Appleton, campaign manager for Mr. Stephenson, is here and the question uppermost this morning was as to whether Edmonds should be a candidate for state chairman. It is understood that up to noon it had not been decided whether there should be a fight made on Edmonds or whether the Stephenson forces should offer to accept Wm. D. Connor's re-election as a compromise.

It is understood a conference will be held with Mr. Connor before any formal announcement is made as to whether Mr. Edmonds shall or shall not be a candidate.

Ex-Congressman S. A. Cook of Neenah also arrived here today and met nothing of his friends. He had nothing to say in regard to the situation but just at present was waiting for the official returns of the primary election to see just what they will show with regard to the vote.

The Stephenson men seem very anxious that there shall be no resolutions of any kind in regard to the senatorial contest in the primary convention. When, last week, they were talking of a possible demand for the passage of a resolution by the convention blinding the members of the convention to the result of the primary, the Stephenson leaders are now talking "no resolutions." Claims are advanced by the opposition forces that they are very anxious to head off any resolutions which may lead to a legislative investigation of the expenditures by candidates in the primary campaign. Legislative candidates who are here, however, say such a resolution is a certainty, although who will introduce it was not stated.

BELOIT AUTO MEET WAS AN UNMITIGATED FAKE

3,000 People Tried To Get Money Back Yesterday, But The Promoter And Jimmie Menhall Had Disappeared.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Beloit, Wis., Sept. 8.—That the motorcycle and automobile races which took place, or rather didn't take place here yesterday, constituted the biggest, wholesale fake that was ever perpetrated on a trusting public is generally conceded by the 3,000 Beloit people who paid fifty cents a head to get into the fair grounds yesterday. They are so thoroughly incensed, even today, that the outside world need not be shocked by an outbreak of mob violence at any moment.

If anything of the kind should occur the rage of the citizens would all be vented on the prostrate form of Jimmie Menhall whose name is coupled with more cusswords than were ever heard in this virtuous city before within a twenty-four hour period of time. "Jimmie" ploughs a conscience void of offense and blames all on a mysterious "A. F. Taylor" of Chicago for whom he claims merely to have acted as agent. This "Taylor" was unable to appear upon the scene, personally, up to the time the first event was called but according to Mr. Menhall he reached the grounds and ran away with the $1,000 in gate receipts before the race started on the bleachers "tumbled" to the fact that they were "sold" and made a rush for the ticket office to demand the return of their hard earned coin. The people insist that this "A. F. Taylor" is myth.

Though only one or two automobiles showed up, fifty motorcycles were on the grounds and such well known riders as Charles W. Van Steens of Chicago who holds the quarter-century record, Fred Huyck who won the six-day endurance race in New York, and Harvey Bernard of Milwaukee, were on hand to compete when the crowd assembled.

But the trick! Instead of spending hundreds of dollars to place it in condition as "A. F. Taylor" had promised in his advertisements, not a thing had apparently been done. Any respectable ploughed field would be no comparison. If a half foot layer of dirt and fine dust had been dumped there it could not have been worse. Blushing men of high repute had been embarrassed to occupy a place in the judges' stand and their mortification and rage when the true inaccuracy of the situation was discovered can be imagined.

Six hardy motorcyclists entered the first race but the balance, after surveying the track, refused to risk their lives. Of the six, only two finished—three dropping out after they had nearly been thrown from their mounts in sliding at the curves and one quitting the game before the end of one race. The other three entered the second race and only one finished. In the automobile events there was only one entry—a machine from Rockford, A. P. Lovelock of Janesville and others were heralded as being in the race but they all failed to appear.

After the automobile had gone around the track a few times the entertainment was at an end. About this time Mr. Menhall disappeared from the scene of action, leaving the silver-loving caps behind to be grabbed by anyone who wanted them. When the disgusted spectators besieged the ticket office, no trace of the man who had relieved them of their holiday shekels was to be found.

DEADLOCK IN THE IOWA LEGISLATURE NOW SEEMS CERTAIN

Conferred With Members of National Committee in Chicago

Today.

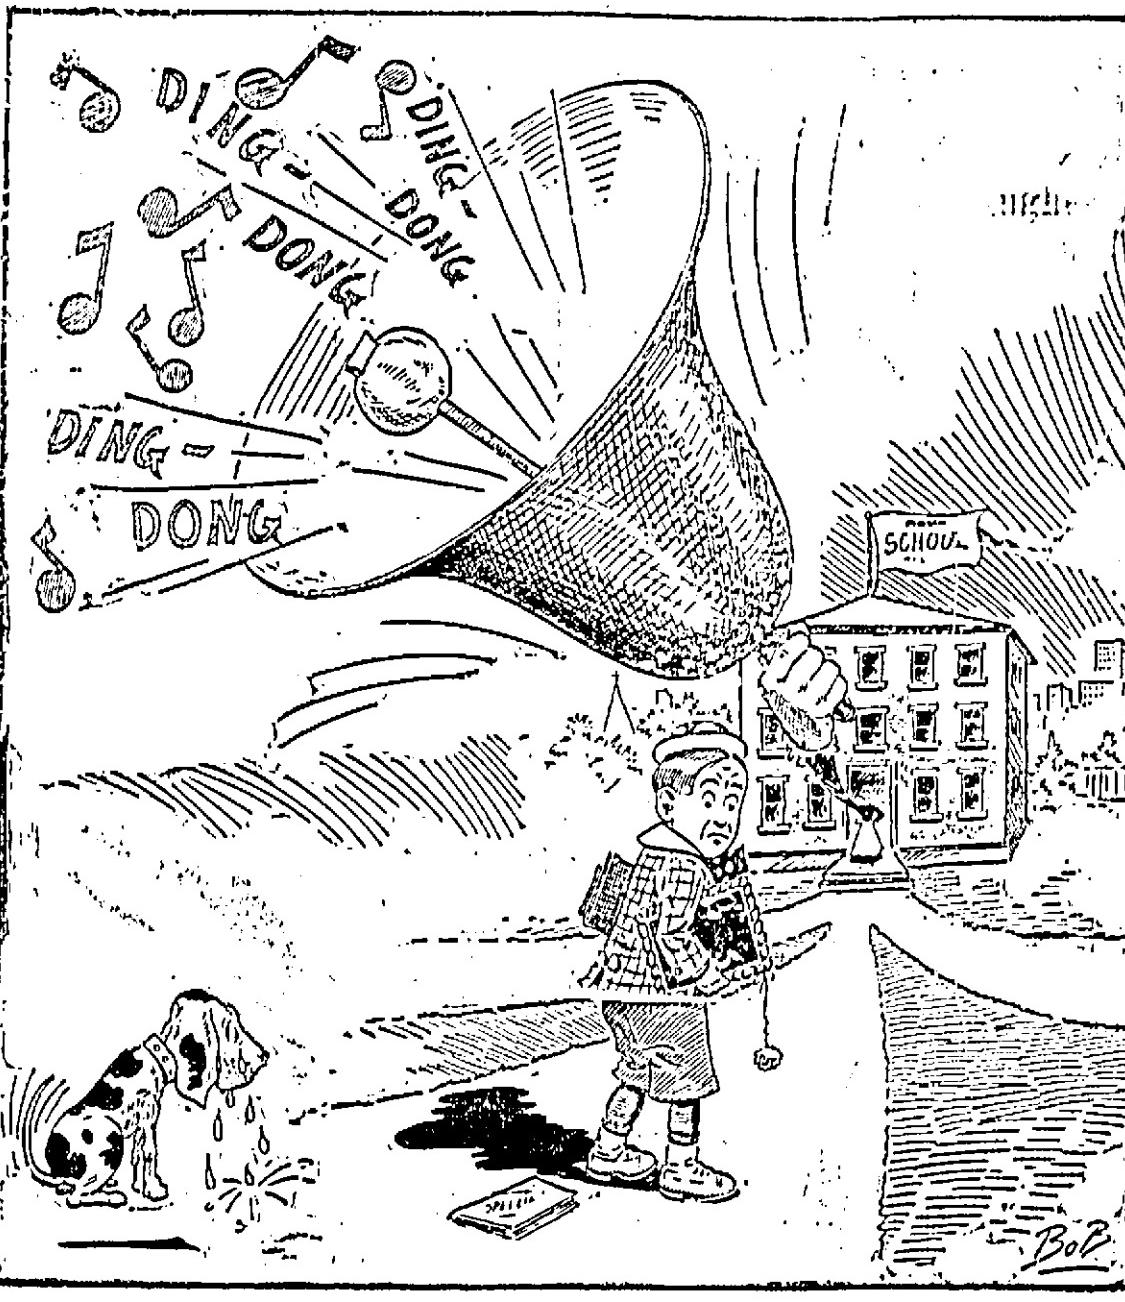

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 8.—William J. Bryan conferred today with the democratic national committee and the members of the various sub-committees in regard to the final plan for the presidential campaign. The situation was canvassed thoroughly, the results up to date reviewed, and plans discussed to make the future work as effective as possible.

Mr. Bryan is going to Peoria tomorrow to attend the democratic state convention. The convention is intended to be more than a state affair. With the presidential and vice presidential candidates on hand, together with a number of other party leaders of eminence, the convention will mark the "real" initiation of the democratic national campaign. The leaders have made plans for a tremendous demonstration. Bryan outlanders, the adherents of the Roger Sullivan faction and the big element of the old-line democracy in Illinois will all take part.

Mr. Bryan and Mr. Kern will deliver speeches in which they will strike at the thought which is to be the central idea of the democratic campaign. The third speaker will be Adlai E. Stevenson, who will formally open his campaign for the governorship.

FIVE CONVENTIONS IN JEFFERSON CITY

All Parties Must Hold Conventions at Same Time By Missouri Primary Law.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 8.—No city of Missouri, except on the occasion of national conventions, ever entertained so many politicians at one time as fell to the lot of Jefferson City today. And on no previous occasion in the history of the state was there ever held a gathering representing two separate and distinct political parties.

The meeting of the various parties at the same time is due to the provisions of the state primary law, which went into effect last month. The law provides that all of the parties having state tickets in the field must hold conventions on the same date and at the same place to ratifying the results of the primary, organize the state committees and prepare platforms. These platforms must be promulgated within twenty-four hours after the meeting of the conventions.

The conventions in session here today represent the democratic, republican, prohibitionist, socialist and independent parties. Chief interest naturally centers in the meetings of the democrats and republicans. These two conventions have attracted many delegates and visitors, while the meetings of the three minor parties are relatively small.

Ahead from the selection of chairman of the state committee the business of the several conventions is purely of a routine character. Indications point to the reelection of Harry M. Rubey and W. S. Dickay, the present heads of the democratic and republican state committees, respectively.

Mississippi Tillers of the Soil Round Up Today For Annual Meeting.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Starkville, Miss., Sept. 8.—Scores of progressive farmers from all sections of Mississippi rounded up today at the State Agricultural and Mechanical College for the annual sessions of the State Farmers' Institute. A gratifying attendance marked the opening of the gathering this afternoon, when Prof. J. C. Hardy welcomed the visitors. W. H. Smith of Durant spoke on the subject of agriculture in the rural schools and G. H. Alford of Magnolia delivered an address on county agricultural high schools. An illustrated lecture on forestry by Prof. George L. Clothier is announced for the evening session. The institute will remain in session until Saturday.

F. P. STARR HAS COMPLETED
SUMMARY OF 1908 TABLES.

SHOWS $829,679 INCREASE

Beloit's Apportionment is Raised $308;
160 and Janeville Gets a Boost of $217,000.

F. P. Starr, county supervisor of assessment, has completed the tables for the assessed value of property in Rock county for 1908. As compared with those of 1907, they show a total increase in valuation amounting to $829,679. There is a decrease in the apportionments of Oxfordville, Magnolia, Newark, and Spring Valley, but it is quite likely that the forthcoming report by the supervisor of assessment of the true value of property in those districts will show a small increase over 1907, increases in value are reported from the balance of the districts, though in many instances they are not large. As usual, the cities of Beloit and Janeville show the largest gains. Beloit's value is raised $398,160 and Janeville has added $217,000 to the roll since 1907.

Mr. Starr states that nearly all of the assessors did splendid work, endeavoring to equalize the various properties in their districts by assessing on a uniform basis, and that while there is still room for improvement, they are working along fair and progressive lines. The large increase in the valuations of Beloit and Janeville, he avers, were due, as a rule, to improvements and not to a raise in individual valuations of property.

The supervisor of assessment will be bound for some time to come in preparing his report to the county board and state tax commission. This report contains the assessed and true values, and ratio of one to another, for each class of property in every assessment district of the county. True value of real estate in each district will be based on the figures received by a careful inspection of the sales during the past three years.

In the following synopsis of the tables he has completed the 1908 valuations are given first and those of 1907 are presented next in order for the purpose of comparison.

Personal property in towns, $2,121,047; last year $2,050,101; increase $70,946. Real estate in towns, $21,887,172; last year $21,794,810; increase $92,361. Totals of personal property and real estate in towns, $23,008,219; last year $24,841,910; increase $163,307.

Personal property in cities and villages, $5,157,661; last year $4,917,058; increase $240,603. Real estate in cities and villages, $18,158,770; last year $17,702,010; increase $455,760. Totals of personal property and real estate in cities and villages, $23,316,371; last year $22,650,968; increase $666,403.

Over Seventy Are Entered for Races at Green County Fair—Sad Death of Caroline Flower.

(EXCERPT FROM THE GAZETTE.)

Monroe, Wis., Sept. 8.—Caroline Flower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Flower of Denver, Colo., died of typhoid fever here Sunday morning after a five weeks' illness, having put up a brave fight for life. Her temperature rose as high as 100 and 107 many times and her life was despaired of for many days. She was a granddaughter of Arabus Lillard, deceased, one of southern Wisconsin's earliest settlers and foremost men.

Two horses are here for the Green county fair that will break the local track's record, 2:11. They are "Red Star" with a mark of 2:07 1/2 and "Tommy Stehway" with a mark of 2:06 3/4. Over seventy horses are entered for the races this week and the fair promises to be the largest and best one in history.

The board of primary election canvassers went over the precincts with the committee on last Saturday and made public the official returns. The Rev. S. A. Ross left Sunday night for Ashland, where he will attend the western Wisconsin conference of the Methodist Episcopal church.

P. B. Luehssinger has received a shipment of 250,000 pounds of marmalade, the largest consignment ever received in Wisconsin by a retail dealer.

T. C. Harrelson of Hustisford, Wis., has been employed as science teacher in the local high school.

Mrs. Wesley Kolster, who lived eight miles north of Monroe, died while being operated upon for tumor at the home of her sister, Mrs. Aaron Kolster, in Churno township. She made a long drive last Friday to the home of her sister, where she could be cared for while convalescing, but her condition proved to be too precarious to undergo the operation.

The Monroe baseball team defeated the Beloit White Sox 5 to 5, but the locals getting seventeen hits, Cavanagh, the local pitcher, struck out fifteen men.

The county cheese market remains quiet. The past week has been without signs of any upward movement and prices remain unchanged. Brick and lumber are reported as moving fairly well but block and round timber remain dull.

Several hundred people enjoyed a smengerfest at New Glarus Saturday night and Sunday. A singing company of Chicago rendered several concerts, Comed Hollinger, representing the Swab government at Chicago, was present and made an address. Thomas Luchengroth of Monroe also spoke.

J. L. Jones, an employee of the Invisible Bank Protection company, has been taken to a specialist at Janeville for treatment on an eye in which he had a piece of steel.

HARRY HOLBROOK IS O. K. SAYS OSHKOSH

Chautauqua Convention of Intern'l Lyceum Which he Offered Janeville Proved a Success.

When the question of a program for the Janeville 1908 Chautauqua assembly was up for discussion last spring and all but one or two of the old board of directors had manifested their intention to "sideline" the whole project, it will be remembered that Manager Holbrook proposed to bring the convention of the International Lyceum association here as a substitute for the program he had prepared and at a cost equivalent to about twice that of the said program. The proposition and the guarantee involved looked pretty large to the two or three who still "stood by the colors," and were not accepted.

Since the dismal failure of the Janeville undertaking, Mr. Holbrook has launched a Chautauqua at Oshkosh and the International Lyceum convention was used as a curtain-raiser for a series of five annual sessions. According to the Oshkosh Northwest, he assembled there about 150 artists representing the best in the reading of literature, music, art, oratory, and character work and the entertainments were witnessed and approved by audiences of from 3,000 to 4,000 people, daily.

"Mr. Starr states that nearly all of the assessors did splendid work, endeavoring to equalize the various properties in their districts by assessing on a uniform basis, and that while there is still room for improvement, they are working along fair and progressive lines. The Modesty of Women

Naturally makes them shrink from the indolent questions, the obnoxious examinations, and unpleasant local treatments, which some physicians consider essential in the treatment of diseases of women. Yet, if help can be had, it is better to submit to this ordeal than let the disease grow and spread. The trouble is that so often the woman undergoes all the mortification and shame for nothing.

Thousands of women who have been cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription write in appreciation of the cure, which dispenses with the examinations and local treatments. There is no other medicine so sure and safe for delicate women as "Favorite Prescription." It cures debilitating drabs, irregularity and female weakness. It always helps, it almost always cures. It is strictly non-alcoholic, non-aconitum, all its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper containing no deleterious or habit-forming drugs, and every native medicinal root entering into its composition has the full endorsement of those most eminent in the several schools of medical practice. Some of them numerous and strongest of professional endorsements of the ingredients, will be found in a pamphlet wrapped around the bottle, also in a booklet mailed free on request, by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. These professional endorsements should have far more weight than any amount of the ordinary lay, or non-professional testimonials.

The most intelligent women now-days insist on knowing what they take as medicine instead of opening their mouths like a lot of young birds and gulping down whatever is offered them. "Favorite Prescription" is of known composition, it makes weak women strong and sick women well.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense in mailing out. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. 21 one-cent stamps for package, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound.

It shall consult the Doctor, free of charge by letter. All such communications are held extremely confidential.

ITS INFLUENCE

Not long ago a Chinese merchant, who had a large equipment of coin for a neighboring province, came to one of the American board missionaries and begged the loan of his flag for the journey. He said he felt sure that the money would be transported more safely if protected by the stars and stripes. A similar incident is reported by Rev. J. H. Potter of Okavama, Japan. He was asked to lead his flag to decorate a hall in which the Japanese were assembled to organize a Friends-of-America society. Another significant episode was the appearance in the Philippines recently of eight Sikhs from northern India, fine specimens of physical manhood over six feet tall. They had heard of a new flag and a new country where men have a better chance, and came to see if the report was true. They wanted to find out how we teach our schools, and sanitize our cities and organize our police. They had traveled 5,000 miles for this purpose, quite eclipsing the queen of Sheba's famous visit to the court of Solomon. Such are some of the by-products of American influence in foreign lands. For it is primarily the missionaries who have stirred the Orient to desire better things for themselves and their country.

CLEVELAND'S TRIBUTE TO TAFT

Grover Cleveland's article on the presidential campaign of 1908, left by him at his death, and just published by the New York Times, is one of the most notable of the public utterances of this great statesman.

It is remarkable for its breadth of view and its spirit of non-partisanship.

After reading this article there can be no doubt on what side Mr. Cleveland would stand in this campaign, if he had lived. That he would have voted for Mr. Bryan is inconceivable.

His eulogy of Mr. Taft as a just and executive, is from all points of view most remarkable, being, as it is, a tribute from the last democratic president to the latest republican presidential candidate.

While this is a hard blow to Mr. Bryan and his aspirations yet a just one, Cleveland stood for the best meaning of democracy. Twice honored as president by his party he has handed down to posterity a heritage of wisdom and justice.

His voice coming from the grave is the voice of a man who has held a high office, the highest in the nation, and knows the responsibility attached to it.

It is warning to the people who would shun reform even though it spelled ruin in capital letters.

ALDRICH'S AMBITION

Capitalists, bankers and business men the country over are anxiously watching for the coming congress to make some radical change in the financial system of the country. Senator Aldrich announces that it is his ambition to leave to posterity, in his work as chairman of the currency and banking commission, something that will stand as a monument to him.

Aldrich has been much maligned. He has been called hard names by the radical elements of the nation and the republican party, yet he is the one specially fitted for the great work he seeks to undertake for the good of the United States at large.

Mr. Aldrich is not regarded as being friendly to their theories; and yet, he has made a most exhaustive study of the currency problem, he has familiarized himself with all that has been written upon the subject, and he is now engaging with enthusiasm in the investigation which the currency and banking commission has entered upon. He is said moreover to have opened his mind widely to the subject and to have expressed the desire to give opportunity for every point of view to be presented.

The mudsill of our republic were laid by men who labored with their hands. The paths of the new world were blazed through primeval forests by men of toil, ironed miners with pick and pan forced the wealth that we enjoy from sluice and flinty rock.

We must continue to honor these men.

We must have a care lest the time may come when, in our prosperous pride, we shall come to look with condescension upon the man who earns his bread by the sweat of his brow and the labor of his hands.

We must impress upon youth the lesson that the man upon whose garments there is the stain of soil, caught in the effort of his daily toil, wears a uniform as patriotic as the uniform of the gayly harnessed soldier; that the scars on the hands of the laborer are as honorable as the scars received in battle.

All hail the Mackay statue!

In our new American art let us begin to fashion the statues of our great men not as these men were finally made, but as in the making.

Because it will keep us from forgetting whence we spring.

A woman may not be logical when she undertakes to argue, but if she is only pretty enough, that doesn't make any earthly difference.—Somerville Journal.

"I notice a peculiar thing about your hotel," said the boarder. "In all your guest rooms you have two very narrow windows, when one bigger one would do as well. I don't see the economy of such construction." "You don't eh?" chuckled the landlord. "Well, if you'll bigger awhile you'll see that there ain't no trunks made that can't be passed out through them windows."

THE STATUE OF A REAL MAN.

A notable statue was presented a few days ago to the University of Nevada by Clarence H. Mackay.

It was the statue of his father, the founder of the Mackay fortunes.

The statue is the conception of a fine idea. The likeness of the first Mackay is shown as he appeared in the day when he laid the foundation of his early fortunes as a miner.

There it stands—a young man of sturdy bearing. He wears a flannel shirt, open at the neck. Corduroy trousers are stuffed into cowhide boots. On the head is a shaggy hat. A miner's pick is clinched in one hand.

A statue of the multimillionaire as he appeared in later life would have shown a different figure—a frock coat, silk hose and high hat.

But the other is the real Mackay.

He was a man before he was a millionaire.

The statue does credit both to father and son. The pride of the son in the father who won success with shovels and pick and spade is commendable and worthy of such a sire.

And as the rugged figure stands in his place it is an ever abiding index to the dignity of labor.

The mudsill of our republic were laid by men who labored with their hands.

When Papke came in he was told that he wanted to make the report of this commission the most valuable contribution to the literature of the currency problem in half a century.

If Senator Aldrich really has such an ambition as this, it is in the highest degree creditable to him. Up to this time his standing before the country has been largely that of the republican boss of the senate, but here he is engaged in a work of constructive statesmanship, and it is devoutly to be wished that out of his labor may come not only a great report but also a substantial improvement in the banking and currency organization of the United States.

It is slow to wrath but look out when it once gets woke up. There was once upon a time a Dutch Admiral who sailed up and down the English channel with a broom stick nailed to his mast to show he could sweep the sea and he did until some fellow came along and licked him.

START AN ACTION FOR DISSOLUTION

Harry B. Smith Asks to Have Receiver Appointed and Partnership Dissolved.

A complaint has been filed and an order to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed has been obtained by Harry B. Smith in an action to dissolve the partnership known as the H. B. Smith Pen company. The complainant named Edward Smith as the defendant and alleges that the creditors of the partnership are pressing it and that it is practically insolvent. According to the articles of agreement entered into by the partners, the defendant agreed to put in $5,000 and of that amount $1,500 is still due and unpaid. Neither has the defendant paid his proportion of the indebtedness of the H. B. Smith Pen company as he agreed.

It is also alleged that the defendant has not allowed the partnership to pay any salary to the plaintiff or send out advertising matter and that by his actions contracts have been cancelled. The complainant asks for the appointment of a receiver and the dissolution of the partnership. On affidavits Judge Grimm signed an order that the defendant should show cause why a receiver should not be appointed. The order will be argued at nine o'clock on the morning of Sept. 10.

INTERNAL REVENUE.

The term "internal revenue" has been restricted in its meaning to such revenues only as are collected under the internal revenue bureau connected with the treasury department, and does not include all revenues that are properly speaking from internal sources; that is, from sources other than duties levied at the frontier upon foreign commodities. Thus monies arising from the sale of public lands, from patent fees, or the revenues of the postal service, are not generally known as "internal revenue."

EDWARD COSTIGAN IN COURT TODAY

Examination was held in the Municipal Court today—charged with resisting Officer.

This morning in the municipal court the examination of Edward Costigan was conducted. Costigan is charged with resisting Officer William Mason on last Saturday evening when Mason placed him under arrest. Officer Mason stopped into the alley running from River street north to Franklin street about eleven o'clock on last Saturday evening. As he reached the alley Costigan turned and made an insulting noise. Mason stepped into the alley and pulled Costigan out, and started north along River street. Costigan was subsequently brought into the police station and locked up. The trial of Costigan was taken to the police station and locked up. The trial of Costigan was taken to the police station and locked up.

As the defendant refused to go home quietly Mason placed him under arrest just before reaching Milwaukee street and as they reached the corner Costigan assaulted Mason and the Officer struck him with his club. Mason then called on night watchman Pierce and the defendant was taken to the police station and locked up. The trial of Costigan was taken to the police station and locked up.

Night watchman Pierce testified as to being called on by Officer Mason and taking Costigan to the police station. He also said that he thought Costigan was drunk at the time.

John Connors testified as to the affair and at the close of his testimony the court adjourned until one-thirty. In the afternoon Attorney J. J. Cunningham, who appeared for the defendant, made a motion to dismiss the complaint on the ground that such resistance as was made by Costigan was not included in the statute. The motion was denied by Judge Ellifield after hearing Mr. Cunningham's argument.

Costigan was then placed upon the stand and testified that he was standing quietly talking in his ordinary tone of voice at the time that Mason first spoke to him. He said that when Mason told him to go home he merely asked him why he should go home and that Mason struck him without any provocation. He denied having made any threats against Mason or any member of the police force.

Fred Connors and Thompson, who were among those witnessing the affair, testified this afternoon in behalf of Costigan. In view of the conflict of testimony Judge Ellifield held Costigan for trial and set the date for September 14th.

Henry Hobbs, who is an inmate of the county farm, was brought up for being drunk and in view of his past record was given eight days at the county jail. Charles Johnson, of Richland Center, was charged with being drunk and disorderly and with disturbing a family on North Franklin street. He was given five days in jail.

Case Dismissed.

On motion of the district attorney the case against Edward Hobbs, of the town of Johnston, was dismissed. Assistant Game Warden Burkett had sworn out a warrant against Hobbs charging him with shooting ducks in the closed season. Yesterday he telephoned to Mr. Ellifield asking him to have the case dismissed as he did not have the necessary evidence. Hobbs was here this morning with his witness and L. E. Gettle of Edgerton, who was also here to appear for Mr. Hobbs.

Perjury Case Adjourned.

By consent of the attorneys the case against Miles of Beloit was adjourned until the 22nd of September. This is one of the perjury cases arising from the recent municipal election in Beloit. The case was taken from Judge Basco on an affidavit of prejudice, W. G. Wheeler and Cornelius Buckley of Beloit appear for the defendant.

When Men Were Wild.

When they begin to talk about tariff it is interesting to look back over the pages of history and see what things were at one time considered necessary. In the time of Sir William Pitt it was considered highly improper for a man to appear without his hair powdered, so Pitt put a tax on the powder, the guinea pig tax as it was called. In consequence, the Whigs cut off their queues and only men servants were allowed hair powder. It was finally so unremunerative that the tax was removed.

His Last Words.

"Are you quite sure your shooting was accidental?" asked the hospital surgeon.

"Oh, yes," gasped the dying victim. "Jiggin"—was—fooling—with—a gun—and—poluted—" "Is there any message you wish to—"

"Just—tell—him—I—said: 'I—told—you—so—ah!'

Problem in Anatomy.

I wonder if these menu writers know how much a leg of lamb costs?" said a lady the other day, as she read for the fifth time a menu in a newspaper having that part of the young sheep as the meat for dinner. "It is all very well to get a leg of lamb if you have a large family," she said, "and can pay the price, but for a small family a shoulder of lamb is much better."

The Summer Vacation.

A clerks who clerked in a dry goods store,
And weary with many vexations
Was given two weeks in the summer to go
And revive on a fortnight's vacation.
She sunburned her nose the very first day,
And the next one she sunburned her forehead;
On the third came the freckles as big as a cent.
To make the dear clerks look horrid.

The back of her neck, a blister it got;
Her ears very soon were a-peeling;
Her nose was so red in spite of cold cream;
That 'twas hard to repress a sad sigh.

She was chased by a cow—also by a hen;
And a million mosquitoes they hit her;
A big humble-bee alighted to my
That he had a stinger to hit her.

She rolled down a hill—she fell off a fence;
A rocker she went after her flying;
From a swing she fell out with awful jerkiness;
And for half a long day was a-crying.
At the end of a week she bid her back home;
And back to the store went a-waiting;
"If this is vacation I'll give it the chisel,
And stick here to him without failing."

But the boss looked her over and jolly said:

"Whoever you are, my young lady,
Go stand for a sign of cigarette and tobacco
On a street comparatively shady."

LONDON'S BIGGEST SHOP—THE COMING WINNER OF COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISE.

Americans take great pride in the erection by Messrs. Snifford & Company of the largest shop in London. It will stand at the corner of Oxford and Duke streets and will be built of Portland cement and steel throughout. The floor space will cover more than eight acres. There will be six stories above the level of the street and three beneath. It is necessary that the work be completed next year.

This is one of the first movements on the part of American retailers to enter the foreign field and will, no doubt, prove a great success from a commercial standpoint as well as bring the British merchant in closer touch with American business.

PICTURES BY A. WEIL
BY LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE
COPYRIGHT, 1908, THE DODGE PUBLISHING CO.

"It took the light kid breath both briefly, and pranced shamlessly: 'Bribed the head clerk of the safe manufacturer who built this!'

Rising, he passed over to the center table, the girl following. "Steady with the light," he whispered; and, loosed the string around the mouth of the bag, pouring its contents, a glittering, priceless, flaming, iridescent treasure hoard, upon the table.

"Oh!" said a small voice at his side. And again and again: "Oh, Oh! Oh!"

Maitland himself was moved by the wonder of it. The Jewels seemed to fill the room with a flashing, amazing, coruscant glamour, rainbow-like. His breath came hot and fast as he gazed upon the trove; a queen's ransom, a fortune incalculable even to its owner. As for the girl, he thought that the wonder of it must have struck her dumb. Not a sound came from the spot where she stood.

Then, abruptly, the sun went out; at least, such was the effect; the light of the hand lamp vanished utterly, leaving a partly-colored blur swimming against the impenetrable blackness, before his eyes.

His lips opened; but a small hand fell firmly upon his own, and a tiny, tremulous whisper shrilled in his ear,

"Hush—ah, hush!"

"What?"

"Steady . . . some one coming."

He heard the dull musical clash of them as her hands swept them back into the bag, and a cold, sickening fear rendered him almost faint with the sense of misplaced, illusory resolution into brutal realities. His fingers clenched convulsively about her wrists; but she held passive.

"Ah, but I might have expected that!" came her reproachful whisper. "Take them, then, my—my partner that was." Her tone cut like a knife, and the touch of the evanescing bag, now forced it into his hands, was hateful to him.

"Forgive me—" he began.

"But listen!"

For a space he obeyed, the silence at first seeming tremulous; then, faint but distinct, he heard the tickle and slide of the brass rings supporting the smoking room portiere.

His hand sought the girl's; she had not moved, and the cool, firm pressure of her fingers steadied him. He thought quickly.

"Quick!" he told her in the least of whispers. "Leave by the window you opened and wait for me by the motor-car."

"No!"

There was no time to remonstrate with her. Already he had slipped away, shaping a course for the entrance to the passage. But the dominant thought in his mind was that at all costs the girl must be spared the exposure. She was to be saved, whatever the hazard. Afterwards—

The tapestry rustled, but he was yet too far distant to spring. He crept on with the crouching, vicious attitude, mental and physical, of a panther stalking its prey.

Like a thunderclap from a clear sky the glare of the light broke out from the ceiling. Maitland paused, transfixed, on tiptoe, eyes incredulous, brain striving to grapple with the astounding discovery that had come to him.

The third factor stood in the doorway, slender and tall, in evening dress—was Maitland—a light, full overcoat hanging open from his shoulders; one hand holding back the curtain, the other arrested on the light switch. His lips dropped open and his eyes, too, wore protruding with amazement. Feature for feature he was the counterpart of the man before him; in a word, he was the very Ansty.

The wonder of it all saved the day for Maitland; Ansty's astonishment was sincere and the more complete in that, unlike Maitland, he had been unprepared to find any one in the library.

For a mere second his gaze left Maitland and traveled on to the girl, then to the riled sofa—taking in the whole significance of the scene. When he spoke, it was as if dazed.

"By God!" he cried—or, rather, the syllables seemed to jump from his lips like bullets from a gun.

The words startled the tableau. On their echo Maitland sprang and fastened his fingers around the other's throat. Carried off his feet by the sheer ferocity of the assault, Ansty gave ground a little. For an instant, they were swaying back and forth, with advantage to neither. Then the burglar's collar slipped and somehow tore from its stand, giving Maitland's hands free play. His grasp tightened about the man's gullet; he shook him mercilessly. Ansty staggered, gasped, reeled, struck Maitland once or twice upon the chest—feebly, weightless elbow-jabs that went for nothing; then concentrated his energies in a vain attempt to wrench the hands from his throat. Reeling, tearing at Maitland's wrists, face empurpled, eyes staring in agony, he stumbled. More slowly Maitland forced him to his knees and hauled him across the floor toward the nearest lounge—with premeditated design; finally succeeding in throwing him flat; and knelt upon his chest, retaining his grip but refraining from throttling him.

Higgins pulled up, thunderstruck, panting and perspiring with agitation. His fat cheeks quivered like the wattle of a gobbler, and his eyes bulged, by degrees, he became alive to the situation.

Maitland began to explain, forestalling the embarrassments of cross-examination.

"By the merest accident Higgins, was passing in my car with his party of friends. Just for a joke I thought I'd stop up to the house and see how you were behaving yourselves. By chance again—I happened to see this light through the library window." And Maitland, putting on incautious hand upon the bell-siese on the desk, withdrew it instantly, with an exclamation of annoyance and four scorched fingers.

"He's been at the safe," he added quickly, diverting attention from himself. "I was just in time."

"My word-r'd!" said Higgins, with emotion. Then quickly: "Did 'e got anythin', do you think, sir?"

Maitland shook his head, scowling over the butler's burly shoulders at the rapidly augmenting concourse of servants in the hallway—ladies, grooms, maids, cooks, and what-not; a background of pale, scared faces to the tableau in the library. "This won't do," considered Maitland. "Get back, all of you!" he ordered, sternly, indicating the group with a dominant and inflexible forefinger. "Those who are wanted will be sent for. Now go! Higgins, you may stay."

"Yes, sir. Yes, sir. But wot an orrid 'appennin', sir, if you'll permit me—"

"I won't. Be quiet and listen. This man is Ansty—Handsome Dan Ansty, the notorious jewel thief, wanted badly by the police of a dozen cities. You understand? . . . I'm going now to motor to the village and get the constable; I may," he invented, desperately, "be delayed—may have to get a detective from Brooklyn. If this accounded stirr, don't touch him. Let him alone—he can't escape if you do. Above all things, don't you dare to move that gag!"

"Most cert'nly, sir. I shall bear in mind wot you says—"

"You'd best," grimly. "Now I'm off. No; I don't want any attendance—I know my way. And—don't—touch—that man—till I return."

"Very good, sir."

Maitland stepped over to the safe, glanced within, cursorily, replaced a bundle of papers which he did not recall disturbing, closed the door and twirled the combination.

"Nothing gone," he announced. An inarticulate gurgle from the prostrate man drew a black scowl from Maitland. Recovering, "Good morning," he said politely to the butler, and striding out of the house by the front door, was careful to slam that behind him, ere darting into the shadows.

The moon was down, the sky a cold, opaque gray, overcast with a light drift of cloud. The park seemed very dark, very dreary; a searching breeze was sweeping inland from the sound, soughing sadly in the tree tops; a chill humidity permeated the air, precursor of rain. The young man shivered, both with chill and reaction from the tension of the emergency just past.

He was aware of an instantaneous loss of heart, a subsidence of the elation which had upheld him throughout the adventure; and to forget or overcome it, took immediately to his heels, scampering madly for the road, oppressed with fear lest he should find the girl gone—with the jewels.

That she should prove untrue, faithless, lacking even that honor which proverbially obtains in the society of criminals—a consideration of such a possibility was intolerable, as much so as the suspense of ignorance. He could not, would not, believe her capable of ingratitude so rank; and fought fiercely, unreasoningly, against the conviction that she would have followed her trifling instincts and made off with the booty. . . . A judgment meet and right upon him for his madness!

Heart in mouth, he reached the gates, passing through without discovering her, and was struck dumb and witness with relief when she stepped quietly from the shadows of a low branching tree, offering him a guiding hand.

"Come," she said, quietly. "This way."

Without being exactly conscious of what he was about he caught the hand in both his own. "Then," he exulted almost passionately—"then you don't—"

His voice choked in his throat. Her face, momentarily upturned to his, gleamed pale and weary in the dreary light; the face of a tired child, troubled, saddened; yet with eyes inexplicably sweet. She turned away, tugging at her hand.

"You doubted me, after all!" she commented, a trifle bitterly.

"I—no! You misunderstood me, believe me, I—"

"Ah, don't protest. What does it make or mar, whether or not you trusted me? You have," she added, quietly, "the jewels safe enough, I suppose?"

He stopped short, agast. "The jewels?"

"I slipped them in your coat pocket before—"

FOR AN INSTANT THEY WERE SWAYING BACK AND FORTH.

were distinctly audible, as, presently, were the heavy, excited voices of men and the more shrill and frightened cry of women.

Hoodless of her displeasure, Maitland seized the girl by the arm and urged her over to the open window, "Don't hang back!" he told her nervously. "You must get out of this before they see you! Do as I tell you, please, and we'll save ourselves! If we both make a run for it, we're lost. Don't you understand?"

"No. Why?" she demanded, reluctantly, apologetic, obstinate—and lovely in his eyes.

"If he were anybody else," Maitland indicated, with a jerk of his head toward the burglar. "But didn't you see? He must be Maitland—and he's my double. I'll stay, brazen it out, then, as soon as possible, make my escape and join you by the gate. Your motor's there—wait! Be ready for me!"

But she had grasped his intention and was suddenly become pliant to his will. "You're wonderful!" she told him with a little low laugh; and was gone, silently as a spirit.

The curtains fell behind her in long, straight folds; Maitland utilized their swiftness with a touch, and stepped back into the room. For a moment he caught the eye of the fellow on the floor; it was upturned to his, ardently intelligent. But the lord of the manor had little time to debate consequences.

Abruptly the door was flung wide and a short stout man, clutching up his trousers with a frantic hand, burst into the library, brandishing overhand a rampant revolver.

"Ands up!" he cried, leveling at Maitland. And then, with a fallen countenance: "G-r-eat 'avins, sir! You, Maitland, sir!"

"Ah, Higgins," his employer crooned the butler blandly.

Higgins pulled up, thunderstruck, panting and perspiring with agitation. His fat cheeks quivered like the wattle of a gobbler, and his eyes bulged, by degrees, he became alive to the situation.

Maitland began to explain, forestalling the embarrassments of cross-examination.

"By the merest accident Higgins,

CRANK NEARS PRESIDENT

ARMED MAN INVADES GROUNDS AT OYSTER DAY.

Captured by Officers. He Says He Wanted Army to Check Operations of Yeggmen.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 8.—A crank armed with an antiquated "bulldog" revolver, was caught near the president's house at Sagamore Hill Monday by the secret service guards. The man described himself as John Coughlin, a detective, and when stopped by the secret service men, presented a card upon which was inscribed his name and the word "officer." He said that he had come to ask the president to order out 10,000 troops to catch yeggmen who had been terrorizing Boston.

Coughlin is supposed to have reached Oyster Bay on the 12:15 train. He walked the three miles to Sagamore Hill, appearing in the grounds shortly after two o'clock. One of the rules for visitors at Sagamore Hill is that no one shall come on foot, so when Secret Service Agent John Adams caught sight of Coughlin tolling up the hill road, he guessed that something was wrong and motioned for the man to go back. Coughlin kept right on, but without acknowledging his presence, and Adams ran down the road to meet him. In response to the secret service man's demand as to his business, Coughlin produced his card and explained in the most casual way that he had come to confer with President Roosevelt concerning the recent outrages by yeggmen in Boston, and to lend back such troops as the president thought fit to order out.

The secret service man tried to explain that the president was not seeing visitors at the moment, hoping to get him quickly out of the grounds.

Coughlin hesitated a moment and then slid his hand toward the back pocket of his trousers. Adams grappled with his man without further parley. Coughlin struggled for a moment, but he is a slightly-built man and Adams had no difficulty in holding him until Agent James Sloan, Jr., came to his assistance. Sloan searched the prisoner and found in his hip pocket a 32-caliber revolver, not loaded. According to the secret service man Coughlin told them that he had been confined for three years in an asylum for the insane.

WEIRD TALE ABOUT DR. RUSTIN.

Omaha Paper Says He Twice Inoculated Himself with Germs.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 8.—In connection with the murder of wife of Dr. Frederick Rustin, a prominent surgeon who was found dead on his porch in Omaha last week, the Omaha World-Herald prints a weird story of alleged former attempt of Dr. Rustin to commit suicide in ways probably never before used by anyone attempting suicide. The World-Herald says:

"Dr. Rustin had before attempted to commit suicide in a manner so cleverly and cunningly devised as to avoid the appearance of suicide, and which was no novel and unique in the method employed that it is probably without a parallel in suicidal annals."

"Dr. Rustin inoculated himself with the bacilli of typhoid fever for the purpose of taking his own life, was stricken with the fever and was no near dead that the attending physician despaired of his life."

"It is also stated that at that time he inoculated himself with the germs of tetanus, or lock jaw, as well, but the effects of this were overcome by the typhoid."

MRS. MALWIN A. DRUMMOND AND HER TWO SONS, HENRY FIELD AND MARSHALL FIELD III.
THE COAT OF ARMS WHICH MRS. DRUMMOND IS NOW ENTITLED TO USE.

The latest international marriage is undoubtedly the most romantic and interesting of all the many matrimonial ventures of American women. It is the marriage of the president of the United States, according to W. G. Beale, who drew the famous Field $150,000,000 fortune, was not a rich woman in wealth is accounted in these days. Marshall Field, Jr., left her about $500,000, and his father's will provided that she should have the income from $1,000,000, less whatever sum she received from her husband, this income to revert again to the estate upon her death. It has been said that Mr. Field, Sr., had a few months longer a codicil to his famous will would have given his daughter-in-law, to whom he was becoming strongly attached, the income from several millions instead of one. Some conjectures are being indulged as to the amount Mrs. Drummond will be likely to save out of the income on a million, which at 5 per cent would equal the salary of the president of the United States. According to W. G. Beale, who drew the famous Field fortune, Mrs. Marshall Field, widow of the late Marshall Field, was quietly married in London, and her society awakened to the fact that Mrs. and Mrs. A. Drummond were off for an automobile honeymoon on the continent.

It is reported that Mrs. Field rejected one of England's favored princesses, who was the choice of King Edward himself, and married a poor man. Mr. Drummond is the second son of the late Edgar A. Drummond.

Proceeding the hasty and unannounced bridal tour, there was a brief ceremony at the registry office, which cor-

Dress as Well as You Can.

It is quite in place to declare most emphatically to all who may read these lines—let the thought of it bear fruit—that dress, proper according to occasion, is one of the mandatory requisites of this twentieth century. Putting up a good front is a duty; buckling it up is quite another matter and is more a matter of ability. It is more a reproach not to dress correctly than it is a credit to do so. It is not an achievement. It is to-day a daily though never monotonous routine, to forget or belittle which is a social and business sin.—Men's Wear, New York.
